

ELIA DREAMED THAT SHE DREAMED A DREAM

That morning, when she opened her eyes, she knew it would be one of those days...

On the one hand, she remembered the nightmare she had just had, which was the most frightening she'd ever had.

On the other hand, the windowpanes were being hit strongly by the rain.

Suddenly, a huge gust of wind opened the window with a plonk, she left the lethargy in which she was.

That morning, when Elia woke up she was sure it wouldn't be one of those days...

She felt a ray of sunshine on her face, then she smiled and got up.

Asunción Navarro Cerdán I2I4A